

CITY OF PRINCE
GEORGE

What happens if I get a ticket?

If you get a ticket, you have a few options:

Pay the fine at City Hall or online within 30 days to avoid extra fees.

Dispute the ticket within 14 days by using the online form.

Do nothing. This will result in extra fees, your ticket will go to collections.

If you pay within 30 days, you avoid extra charges. After 30 days, a $25 late fee will be added to the original fine.

If you dispute the ticket, the 30-day deadline pauses until the dispute is resolved. In most cases we will respond by email, so please provide your email address on the dispute form.

If your dispute is successful, you owe nothing. If it's unsuccessful, you can request a hearing with a provincially-appointed Adjudicator (who is not a City employee). These are scheduled 4 times/ year. Adjudication is your opportunity to have a face-to-face meeting and explain why you should not have to pay for your ticket.

If you lose the hearing, you pay the original fine plus $25 to help cover the cost of the adjudication.

If you ignore the ticket, after 60 days you'll receive a final notice letter. This letter will tell you that you are required to pay your original fine plus $25. If you still don't pay after an additional 60 days, your ticket goes to collections, which hurts your credit score.
